

Consumers' Research is an independent educational organization based in Washington, D.C., whose mission is to increase the knowledge and understanding of issues, policies, products, and services of concern to consumers and to promote the freedom to act on that knowledge and understanding.

Consumers' Research, established in 1929, is seeking junior fellows for our Fall 2017 program. Daily tasks include researching, writing, and publishing articles focusing on Health Care, Finance, Energy and Technology. Fellows will also have significant roles in the brand development and marketing of the organization.

This position will give applicants the opportunity to develop their research, writing, social media promotion, and marketing skills. Fellows will also learn about policy in areas they are interested in. All fellows' work will be published online and in our quarterly magazine – building their own portfolio as well as that of Consumers' Research.

The ideal candidate is a rising Junior or Senior or Master's degree candidate, with strong writing skills. Research, marketing, and social media experience is a plus. A demonstrated interest in consumer related trends such as FinTech, the sharing economy, and self-driving cars is encouraged!

Our office is located in Washington, D.C. several blocks from The White House and the campus of George Washington University, in the historic Foggy Bottom neighborhood. We offer financial compensation. Our fall internship program runs 9 weeks, from early-October to mid-December. To apply, please submit a resume, cover letter, and relevant writing sample (3 pages max) to info@consumersresearch.org with subject line "Fall 2017 Application." The deadline to apply is October 1.